Package Backup Tool for Win XP & U3 backup in a very simple way. Package Backup for U3 makes backup without damaging the device. The last time I checked, LeBron James played in Cleveland. The last time I checked, Cleveland has the fourth-worst record in the NBA. He had better check again because in the same breath LeBron said he wouldn't tank for Cleveland. I know he wouldn't tank because that's ridiculous. The NBA is a league about winning titles. Getting your team to the NBA Finals is as rare as winning a championship. The Trail Blazers didn't win a championship with Damian Lillard and CJ McCollum. The Spurs didn't win a championship with Tony Parker. There's no reason to get your hopes up for a potential championship with a great player on your team, just like there's no reason for Cleveland fans to get their hopes up. Your team isn't going to the NBA Finals every year, and you better enjoy it while you can. While LeBron is still amazing, I've always had a funny feeling the Lakers would be better off without him. They're a great team. You love them. They also, however, have the fourth-worst record in the NBA. There are six teams in the league who have the worst record in the NBA. Those six teams (the Bulls, Grizzlies, Magic, Jazz, Suns and Kings) combined have more wins than the Lakers this season, and a combined 26 more wins than the Lakers have. This isn't rocket science. You don't win with LeBron. It's often said that LeBron is the best player in the world, and I'm not going to argue with that. LeBron was MVP in the NBA last season, but there were two teams who had a better season with LeBron on their team, and there's no reason to think he couldn't take the Lakers to the Finals. It's not like Carmelo Anthony can carry a team, either. You're not going to win a title with an awful team. No one wins a championship with a .500 team. No one wins a championship with a team of non-professionals. You can't win with a bunch of dudes
